VON HINDENBURG HONORED AS A HERO

THIS TIME THE LINE HELD AT BRANDENBURGER GATE

As Millions Paid Tribute To the Great General, Who Is Now President of the Republic of Germany—Thousands Honored the Sturdy, Stalwart Soldier of Ex-Kaiser William's Army Who Celebrated His Eightieth Birthday Anniversary Sunday.

Von Hindenburg was first in the hearts of his countrymen Sunday as never before. Not since William I. led the German armies thru the Brandenburger gate in 1871 on their return from the Franco-Prussian war has Berlin witnessed an ovation like that showered on Paul Von Hindenburg Sunday at Berlin, Germany on the occasion of his eightieth birthday anniversary.

It was primarily a tribute to Von Hindenburg, the man, that found an outlet in the veritable drumfire cheering which echoed and re-echoed along the route which he traversed, but its political significance is set down as a tangible asset to the German republic, for the president's natal day was the signal for a political truce in which his services to the new Germany found free acknowledgment from friend and foe alike.

The colors of the republic predominated in the display of bunting throughout the city.

A warm autumn sun beamed benignly on the octogenarian president as he leisurely motored thru a twelve mile lane, flanked with guards of honor, back of whom men, women and children were massed to the house fronts.

Veteran police officials were inclined to estimate the turnout which applauded the president on the drive to the stadium at not less than 1,000,000. Another 100,000 greeted him in the huge amphitheater, among whom were 40,000 singing school children.

The president's reply to Chancellor Marx, who voiced greetings in behalf of the government and German people and eulogized the president's devotion to duty and Christian citizenship, was a fervent plea for national unity and reconciliation with the new order of things in Germany.

"My most sincere thanks to you and the government also applies to the entire German people," said President Von Hindenburg, alluding to praise for his service to the fatherland in war and peace.

"It was my duty, my life's work, always devoted to the Fatherland, and I shall continue to serve this end for the span of life still allotted to me, not for honor or personal profit, nor for any party or group, but to serve, and with God's help, to benefit all Germany."

"It is my fondest hope to see our people united. Many Germans, unable to find a connecting link between the past, present and future, are continuing embittered and suspicious toward their neighbors.

"Despite the diverging viewpoints and interests, it should not be so difficult to find a means of uniting us in thought common to the Fatherland connecting all with the land of our forefathers. Respect for the opinion of others, for honorable new methods for glorious past traditions must be the foundation of such unity."

"In this hour, my thoughts turn to our countrymen in the Rhineland, whose liberation from foreign occupation, to our very great disappointment, is not yet perfected. I greet them feelingly, with hope for their speedy freedom, the attainment of which will be the preeminent task of German politics."

"My heart's desire is that all Germany may rise from present adversity in brotherly unity for a future strong, free, consolidated Germany, with which thought I greet the German people in unshaken faith and loyalty."

ATTENDED CHRISTENING.

Miss Ann Loretto McGinnis and Mr. Richard Radebaugh, of Columbus acted as sponsors Sunday for Charles Fredrick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Taggart of Lincoln road Grandview, Columbus, who was baptized at Our Lady of Victory church, Upper Arlington, by Rev. Father Thomas A. Nolan. Miss McGinnis was also godmother for the little man's mother.

KANSAS CORN

Kansas farmers assert that this year's corn crop is the best ever raised in the state. Above is J. A. Ostrand of Shawnee county with some of his choice ears of corn exhibited at the Kansas Free fair at Topeka.

MAYOR'S COURT

Guilford Brown, charged with making homebrew and having in his possession intoxicating liquor, had a hearing before Mayor Fitzpatrick Monday and was given a fine of $250 and costs, amounting to $11.10. In default, he was sent to jail. His wife Dora Brown, charged with resisting officers, was given a fine of $200 and was sentenced to 30 days in the Woman's reformatory. Mrs. Brown will be held as a witness in a juvenile case in probate court before being sent to Marysville.

Susan B. Anthony Fined

Susan B. Anthony was the first American suffragist to be arrested for her principles. In order to test the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments she cast ballots at the state and congressional elections at Rochester in 1872. She was indicted for illegal voting and a fine imposed. She defiantly refused to pay the fine, but was never jailed.

Worth-While Invitation

An invitation to a wedding in Cairo is an important event, because, instead of being asked for a ten-minute church ceremony or a brief reception, the invitation reads "for three days." There is feasting during all this time, and the house and street are liberally decorated with flags and lanterns.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SHREWD GAME OF POLITICS BY GOVERNOR

Reasons That If He Hopes To Land In White House Should Serve As Senator.

In refusing to permit his name to be used as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and making his refusal emphatic, Governor Donahey is playing a shrewd political game than he is given credit for.

In his statements declaring he is in no sense a candidate, and must not be considered as one, the governor stresses the fact that he is aware of his limitations. This is generally taken as meaning he feels a lack of ability to fill so great an office as the presidency and give an impression of modesty among the people, all of which is not without its psychological effect for the future.

But what the governor undoubtedly means is that he is not unaware of his present political limitations. He realizes that while having been elected governor for three terms in Ohio, a Republican state, has made him, in a sense, a national character there is not that general knowledge of his capacity throughout the country as to have the needed appeal, if he were to be the candidate for the presidency. He has not traveled extensively and the voters know little of him, except as governor.

He, therefore, reasons logically that the better course to pursue, if the White House is to be reached, is to serve as United States senator for a term at least. There is a feeling this office could be secured. His policy in the senate would be that of the friend of the people, irrespective of political affiliations. This, he reasons, would make him a national character and by natural sequence lead to the presidential nomination later. It is good reasoning and undoubtedly forms the basis for refusal to permit consideration of his name at this time for the higher office.

The governor is a comparatively young man. He can well afford to wait four or even eight years. In the meantime, he can be adding to his political stature and gaining the wider political reputation of which he feels the need.

It is his wish to go to the senate and by the reasoning which he applies, a term or two there, with the opportunities it offers, could lead to the presidential chair and the White House.—George U. Marvin.

Unappreciative Guest

Ralph, three years old, was spending the day with his aunt. Thinking a custard would appeal to him, she inquired if he liked them, at which he answered: "Oh, my, yes." However, upon being served, it fell short of his expectations. He ate a little and, passing it to his aunt, said: "You can have it, Aunt Myra. I am so full, and if you want some water to wash it down, here's my glass."

Not Altogether Aged

There is a woman in our neighborhood who is eighty years of age, but who walks with an erectness and springiness that is the envy of women many years younger than she. The other day my young daughter saw her pass, and, turning to me she said: "Mother, her face is much older than her legs, don't you think?"—Exchange.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Toledo—Five persons were dead Monday and more than a score of others were confined to homes and hospitals with injuries received in auto accidents in and near Toledo over the weekend.

Oberlin—Funeral arrangements were to be made today for Azariah Smith Root, 65, 40 years librarian at Oberlin college, who died last night. Death was caused by heart disease following an operation. He was one of the founders of the Anti-Saloon league and was at one time president of the American Library association.

Cleveland—Miss Bertha Willkon, 26, a nurse, was in a hospital Monday with a bullet wound in the leg while police shot an unidentified man who shot her Sunday night as she entered the basement of the Jewish orphanage.

Dayton—Authorities here today continued their investigation of the drowning of Dayton Parker, 21, orphanish at Patterson Memorial Presbyterian church. His body was discovered Sunday in Stillwater river.

St. Clairsville—Eleven union men including three officials were taken to Steubenville today where they were to be arraigned on charges of violating the federal mine injunction.

Lancaster—During the absence of James Ryan, from his track farm near Buckeye Lake, thieves picked his peach crop estimated at fifteen bushels, stole eight dozen eggs and escaped with their loot in a truck.

Springfield—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Mrs. Treva Morningstar, bride of a month, who was last seen when she left her home Saturday night to visit her mother in another section of the city. Her car was found yesterday by her husband.

Bellefontaine—Trace of gold has been discovered on the property of Mrs. G. W. Hoofman here it was announced when samples of rock assayed by L. Glover, of Seattle, Washington, were returned with a favorable report.

PARALYSIS SPREAD
ALARMS SCIENCE

Increase Seen as Threat of Epidemic.

Washington.—Are we on the verge of another infantile paralysis epidemic like that of 1916? Late summer and early fall are the times when this little understood disease is most prevalent, but the number of cases reported to the United States public health service in the last few weeks have shown a decided gain over those reported for the same period last year.

The figures for the week ending August 6 show 180 cases as opposed to only 66 for the corresponding week of 1926. Ohio reports several widely scattered cases, while California has 66 for one week alone.

Like influenza, poliomyelitis, as infantile paralysis is known to medical men, is one of the unfinished problems on which scientists are still hard at work. It is believed to be caused by a filterable virus, which is spread by contact with articles that have been touched by the infected person. From the way in which epidemics have spread in the past it is thought that it must be transferred either by animals or human carriers, but at this time little has been definitely established on this point.

In the big epidemic in New York city that occurred eleven years ago it was clearly shown that prompt hospitalization of all cases that could be safely moved checked the spread of the disease more effectively than any other measure. Another outstanding point that emerged from this experience was the fact that isolation of groups of children from contact with other children or adults, even when carried out in the midst of areas where the disease was prevalent, sufficed to protect almost absolutely from infection.

At the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research attempts have been made to immunize monkeys to poliomyelitis but the results were too variable to be useful.

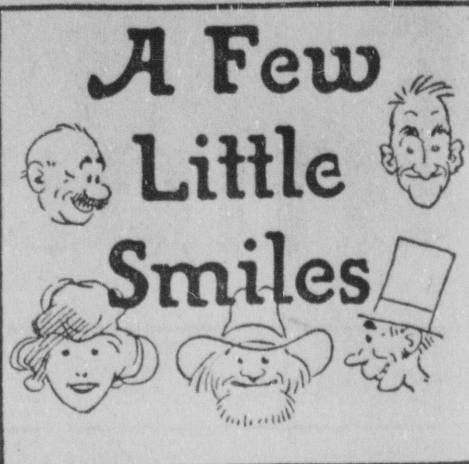

French workers have tried to use pieces of dried spinal cord after the same procedure as that followed in rabies treatment, but the results were too uncertain to be practical. Dr. E. C. Rosenow of the Mayo clinic has used an antistreptococcus serum to treat acute cases, but this has not received any general application.

Mother's Expressive Eyes

Ella started to lift the baby from its crib, but caught her mother's eye, and desisted. Afterward, she was overheard telling her playmate that she knew when her mother didn't want her to do anything. "She doesn't have to tell me," Ella added; "she just thinks stop, and I can see her think."

SERVED HIM RIGHT

"Hello, Hayseed," said the facetious youth. "How's it for a lift to Centerville?" He jumped into the car without waiting for an answer. Twenty minutes passed.

"Quite a distance to Centerville, isn't it?"

"Uh, huh."

Twenty minutes more.

"Say, how far is it to Centerville?"

Hunting From Automobile

One of the sporting pastimes of Texas is shooting coyotes from automobiles on the prairies. A northerner who has just returned from the Lone Star state has the following to say: "It is great sport to hunt coyotes with a high powered car. They run on the prairie and can't get away unless they escape into the timber. They are fleet, but of course they can't outrun a car. I've shot them from a car going fifty miles an hour."

Raised Trouble

"So the Browns have had a disagreement and separated. What was it about?"

"She wanted to have her face lifted, and he insisted that it be the mortgage."

Beg Pardon

Jones—How much are the oranges?

Mr. Clerk—Sixty cents a dozen.

Jones—Aren't you a little dear?

Girl Clerk—Sir, I'll call the manager!

Tinsel Weaves to Be Winter Mode
Gold and Silver Effects to Feature Silks, According to Prediction.
Tinsel weaves or gold and silver worked into the pattern in silks have great importance for winter, according to a Paris fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. In one the colored pattern has a gold surface which discloses a snake pattern in certain lights. Two colors or changeable effects are more important than ever, and fine floral patterns and designs in velvets and lames are patterned for frocks, while big patterns are for evening wraps. "Velours diapane" is Bianchini's new sheer velvet. "Vestale," in silk and wool, is something like a faille, while "cotele feffe" is akin to "flaminga," but with heavier ridges. "Turlah" reminds one of a satin-back marocain, with marked waves in its ridged surface on the rougher side, and "troubadour" is another ridged fabric in silk and wool, which looks like a cross between ottoman and a fine pique.
In one of the lames the design is in conventional leaves, which form small lozenges and group to make big ones which alternate in gold and silver. Fruit patterns are developed to alternate with those in floral designs. Degraded velvets as from white to black are matched by a moire patterned silk with satin back. Both white and gold or silver and black and gold are important color combinations in the tinsels, while blues and silver are shown for youthful evening wear. Gold threads make the trousers stripe patterns in silks.
Plain woollens treated with metal, especially gold, many jerseys, scratched and velvety woollens and new weaves and patterns in "kashatulla" are important in the Rodier collection of woollens, while the kasha family has grown considerably and printed "fusli-kasha" is one of the important media for winter. "Vella diallie" names one of the soft, loose velvety weaves, with the nap slightly scratched. "Lissi-crepella" is lighter than crepella, while "kashavelline" is smoother and thicker than the velvety vella diallie. "Giv-abure" is a coarse diagonal weave for sports clothes, often in two colors and at least two tones. "Vellor angora" is gold on one side and velvety angora on the other, and "kasha givror" is the same on both sides, shot with gold. A variation of this shows the gold in marbled effect.
Kashatulla is worked with flowers in gold and in tones darker than the background. "Kashatullor" implies much gold in the pattern, and "vella kashatulla" suggests that one side is smooth and velvety. Double weaves, made very loose in kashatulla, look as if a thread of one color had been thrown over another in a ring which suggests hand knitting. Jerseys or "djersas" are featherweight in lightness, combined with gold, made in lacy patterns, fashioned with many types of irregular stripes, as in two tones of green with white or in two tones of blue. A thicker and wider rib in jersey is called "djersakashabure." Solid gold jersey looks like coat-of-mail and "zebror djersakasha" reminds one of a zebra, and other patterns are watered in effects. Rodier's new things are thicker and look like pearls designed in two tones and plain colors.

JUDGE BLOSSER MAY HERE THE RUM CASE
Judge Peter J. Blosser is not disqualified to hear and determine liquor cases because he is a taxpayer, the District Court of Appeals has ruled. The decision was handed down in the case of Jess Fain, plaintiff in error versus the State of Ohio, defendant in error.
Fain was convicted by Judge Blosser of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor. His attorneys, Day and Rais, filed a motion to dismiss the case on the ground that Blosser was a taxpayer and therefore interested in the outcome from a pecuniary standpoint. Their contention was that under the U. S. Supreme Court's ruling in the now famous Tumey case, any court with a pecuniary interest in the outcome of a case was disqualified. Because part of the fine and costs in the Fain case would go to the general fund of the county and because Judge Blosser was a taxpayer, the defense attorneys contended that he was pecuniarily interested and therefore disqualified.
Commenting upon the case the appeals court decision reads: "No record that the judge was a taxpayer as charged is included in the evidence, therefore the question was not properly presented. Assuming that the said judge was a taxpayer, it does not follow that he was for that reason disqualified."
The disqualification aimed at in the Tumey case was one arising from an individual and personal pecuniary interest as distinguished from the interest held in common by all citizens who are taxpayers in matters regarding public revenues and taxations.
The objection here made, if allowed, would render all judges and citizens incompetent to act in any criminal case. Such a situation was not intended to nor does it follow the rule announced in the Tumey case.
The Appellate Court affirmed Judge Blosser's decision in the Fain case. Day and Rais laid similar lines for appeal in various other liquor cases, making the same claim that Judge Blosser, as a taxpayer, was disqualified from hearing or determining the case in point. The decision announced nullifies appeals in these other cases.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

BIRDS IN CAPITAL FOR TOUR TO SOUTH

Flock Into Washington From Nearby States.

Washington.—Thousands of feath-
ery members of the Purple Martin society have flocked to Washington from nearby states for their annual convention, preparatory to embarking on their usual winter tour of South America.

The birds have selected as their meeting place the wires atop the poles
on Floral street, between Thirtieth street and Alaska avenue, where they hold early morning and night sessions
to the wonderment of residents of the vicinity and passing motorists.

The other morning they rested side
by side on the wires for a distance of
two blocks, later taking off for an inspection tour and "bird's-eye" view
of the city. In the evening they return again and one of these mornings
they are going to adjourn suddenly
and begin their flight southward, according to Dr. C. W. Richmond of the division of birds, Smithsonian institution.

Doctor Richmond points out that the martins seem to have selected the national capital as an annual meeting place in the late summer. In previous years they have held their sessions at different points around town, one year
selecting the elm trees near the Pan-
American building, another year using the trees near the botanic garden
and still another year meeting on Rhode Island avenue in the northeast
section.

"After assembling from nearby
places and from Virginia, Maryland,
Pennsylvania and other sections near Washington, they usually hang around
for a few days before suddenly taking off in one group for the South," Doctor Richmond stated. "They will take up winter quarters probably in South America. Sometimes they number
from 10,000 to 20,000 birds, according
to various estimates."

Other large flocks meet in other cities about this time of year, Doctor Richmond said, and they, too, will journey to warmer climes.

While the exact date of departure
of the visitors on Floral street can only be guessed, it appeared certain
that leaders of the flock will see that
the migration begins before the hunting season opens.

Uncle Sam's Sweetie Costs Him $700,000,000

Washington.—That Uncle Sam has a sweet tooth is shown by the great increase in production
and consumption of candy, chewing gum and ice cream. The combined values of these products in 1914, the year the World war began, totaled $197,000,000.
They rose to $700,000,000 in 1927.

Candy leads with a value of $379,081,411, and then comes ice cream at $286,175,986 and chewing gum at $47,938,000.

Dried milk that has been treated

"The specific gravity of the milk is

Housewives, Here Are Ways to Win Blue Ribbons at Your County Fair

By Kathryn St. John

Making cakes for exhibition at the County Fair is not really very different from the making of good cakes at home. The home cook will,
of course, do her utmost to make
the best-looking and best-tasting
cake.

It must be remembered that texture and flavor are the two high-scoring points. The former is controlled by the method of mixing and
baking, while the latter depends
upon the proportion of the ingredients used and their quality.

The making of a cake for the County Fair is not a hit-or-miss proposition. A definite and well-tried recipe should be followed. The butter used must be strictly fresh,
and the younger the eggs, the better. Evaporated milk imparts flavor
and keeping qualities to cake and
the housewife will be assured of success if she uses it in making the icings.

Spice Cake

1/2 cup fat 4 tbsp. evaporated
1 cup sugar 6 tbsp. water
2 eggs 6 tsp. water
1 1/2 cups pastry 1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 cup flour 1/2 tsp. nutmeg
3 tsp. baking powder 1/2 tsp. cloves
1/4 tsp. salt 1/2 tsp. boiling
water

Soak spices in boiling water.
Sift flour with baking powder and salt twice. Cream fat and sugar thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs
and continue beating until the mixture is a light color and has a smooth, fluffy appearance. Add spices, then the flour and diluted
milk alternately, beginning and ending with flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Bake at 375° F.
(medium oven).

Yield: 2 round tins or 10 servings.

Caramel Fudge Icing

2 1/2 cups granulated 1/2 cup evaporated sugar milk diluted with
1/2 cup hot water 1/2 cup butter
1/4 tsp. salt 1/2 tsp. vanilla

Caramelize 1/2 of the sugar by sifting it slowly into a hot frying
pan. Shake the pan constantly to prevent burning. The sugar should melt about as fast as it is put in.
When it is melted and a light, amber color, add the 1/2 cup of hot water and boil until caramel dissolves and
a thin syrup is formed. Add the syrup to the diluted milk with the rest of the sugar, and the salt. Boil

to the soft ball stage or 113° C.
(236° F.). Cool until lukewarm.
Add the vanilla and beat vigorously
until creamy and stiff enough to spread. Yield: Sufficient for 2
double layer cakes.

Prune Cake

1/2 cup fat 5 tbsp. water
1 cup sugar 1 tsp. cinnamon
2 eggs 1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1 1/2 cups pastry 1/2 tsp. cloves
1 cup flour Few grains
3 tsp. baking powder cayenne
1/4 tsp. salt 1/2 tsp. boiling
water

Soak spices in boiling water.
Sift flour with baking powder and
salt twice. Cream fat and sugar
thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs
and continue beating until the mixture is a light color and has a smooth, fluffy appearance. Add
spices, then the flour and diluted
milk alternately, beginning and ending with flour. Add prunes and stir until thoroughly mixed. Bake at 375° F. (medium oven). Ice with Prune Whip Frosting. Yield: 2 round tins or 10 servings.

Prune Whip Icing

1 1/2 cups prunes 1 cup evaporated
2 cups cold water milk
Few grains salt 1 cup whipping
6 tbsp. sugar cream

Soak prunes over night in cold water. Cook 5 minutes, add sugar
and salt and cook two minutes
longer. Remove prunes from their liquid and pit. There should be 1 1/2 cups of chopped prunes. Then add lemon juice and let cool. Combine evaporated milk and cream
and whip until stiff. Fold
prunes lightly into the whipped cream and spread between layers
of cake.

First Transatlantic Flight Was the Fastest

New York.—Contrary to the belief
of most newspaper readers, nonstop
airplane flights across the Atlantic
not only have failed to hang up any speed records in 1927, but actually
have fallen short of the mark set eight
years ago by the first plane to blaze
this trail. A comparison of times and
distance in this field follows:

1919—Alcock and Brown, from St.
Johns, N. F., to Clifden, Ireland, 1,960
miles in 16 1/5 hours; average speed,
120.9 miles an hour.

1927—Lindbergh, from Roosevelt
Field, L. I., to Paris, France, 3,310
miles in 33 1/2 hours; average speed,
107.7 miles an hour.

Chamberlin, from Roosevelt Field
to Plymouth, England, 3,425 miles, in 34 hours; average speed, 100.7 miles an hour.

Byrd, from Roosevelt Field to Brest,
France, 3,524 miles in 33 1/2 hours;
average speed, 105.2 miles an hour.

Brock and Schlee, from Harbor
Grace, N. F., to Plymouth, England,
2,150 miles in 19 1/3 hours; average
speed, 111.4 miles an hour.

Power Only in Reason

One fact stands out in bold relief in the history of man's attempt for betterment. That is, when compulsion is used, only resentment is aroused, and
the end is not gained. Only through moral suasion and appeal to men's reason can a movement succeed.—

CELEBRATION OF OHIO HISTORY DAY AT LOGAN ELM PARK WAS GREAT, BIG SUCCESS

Fully Six Thousand People From All Over the Country Met Sunday Afternoon At Famous Tree Where Chief Logan Delivered His Eloquent, Pathetic Speech More Than One Hundred and Fifty Years Ago—Orator of the Day Was Koo-tut-pah-he-too, a Pawnee Indian—John F. Carlisle Presided and Mr. Cameron Recited Address—Adelphi Band Furnished the Music—Day Was Ideal and No Accidents Marred the Pleasure of Meeting—Reception At Home of Dr. and Mrs. Jones.

The 153d anniversary of the day that Logan, chief of the Mingoes, made his immortal speech under the famous Logan Elm, and the third anniversary of the Ohio Historical association, was duly celebrated Sunday afternoon with a fine program of speeches intermingled with a fine band concert given by the Community band, of Adelphi.

Koo-tut-pah-he-too, as he is known to his Indian friends, and which means "Peaceful Bear," was the main attraction. His family name is Ralph Allen and he is a student at Denison university at Granville.

A crowd estimated at six thousand people were curious to see the Indian and hear him talk, and he did not disappoint his big audience, altho he was somewhat late and did not appear until a portion of the program had been rendered. Mrs. Howard Jones, the president of the Ohio History Day association, was somewhat worried and was fearful that the great-grandson of the hereditary chief of the Pawnee tribe would not show up. He explained that his tardiness was due to the action of his Ford.

John F. Carlisle, of Columbus, who presided, filled in the program by introducing Lawrence Cameron, senior sagamore of the Deerfoot tribe of Red Men of Columbus, who is the possessor of an excellent voice, and who recited Longfellow's Hiawatha. In his rendition, you could almost see Minnehaha (Laughing Water). Mr. Cameron has a most excellent memory and his enunciation is almost perfect.

The stellar attraction, Koo-tut-pah-he-too, is a man of small stature and weighs about 130 pounds. He has the prominent nose and features of the real Redskin. He was attired in Indian dress and made a most favorable impression.

In beginning he told his audience that he would try to express the feelings within him, and he first sang several Indian songs; "By the Waters of Minnetonka," a Sioux serenade "a love song," "From the Land of Sky Blue Waters," and a song his grandmother used to sing, entitled "True Speaking to Each Other."

The Indian has a low contralto voice and his songs were barely audible to the major portion of the crowd, as the breeze carried his voice from, instead of to, his audience. The same notes one hears in the songs of the Hawaiians and other members of the Malay race, were discernible in the singing of Koo-tut-pah-he-too.

His theme was, "The Indian of Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." He said we are pictured as a horde of painted barbarians. Christopher Columbus, in his first letter to his sovereign queen, said that there is not a better people than these. The first word he interpreted from the Indian was the word, "welcome." The speaker said, I do not come to you as an alien, but as one of the aboriginals. We introduced to the white man; cotton, tobacco and corn, America's three main crops, the three great money makers. His knowledge of wood lore is an acquisition of civilization. The Indian produced two of your great generals, Logan and Parker. In the Spanish-American war, eighty-five per cent of the Indian population volunteered to fight, which was a larger ratio than any other race, and they also subscribed for $25,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds in the World war. The Indian never broke a treaty, they left that to the whites. The Indian language does not contain a profane word and the Indian has not produced an individual who has been a menace to free government.

The Indian is pictured today sitting on a drooping horse and he is described as the vanishing race. He is not vanishing, he is increasing in numbers. We are buckling on the armor of civilization, we are building on a sturdy foundation, and there are no limits or heights to which we may not aspire. Strong of mind and with the physique of our forefathers, we are especially adapted to attain accomplishments denied our forefathers. The Indian in time will aspire to true American citizenship.

Following the ceremonies in the park, a reception was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones at Park Place, where the people had an opportunity to meet Koo-tut-pah-he-too, who favored them with a short talk and sang some of the Indian songs.

Among those present at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Schoedinger, Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Samuel Rindsfoos, Mr. and Mrs. Siesel Rindsfoos and Mrs. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Galbreath, Mr. John F. Carlisle and daughters, of Columbus; Mr. George F. Barries, of Canal Winchester and Mrs. Sittler of Lancaster.

The entire celebration was a great success, due in a large measure to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Jones, the president of the association.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The marriage of Miss Evangeline Troutman, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Mrs. George J. Troutman, to Rev. George Schuster, rector in charge of Martin Luther Lutheran church, Columbus, was solemnized Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church, this city. The bride's attendants were Miss Marguerite Fohl and Miss Vera Walters, Gladde Troutman acted as best man and George Troutman gave the bride in marriage. Rev. George J. Troutman, father of the bride, performed the marriage using the full ring ceremony. The bridal party marched to the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. William Gulden. Little Anna Marie Feldmeth, of Butler, Pennsylvania, a cousin of the bride was the ringbearer and Norma Jean Brown was the flower girl. Rev. A. Schalls

the Capital university, acted as the Capital university, acted as ushers. Rev. Ellis Snyder sang two hymns and also "Oh, Perfect Love." Miss Barthelmas sang two hymns, one before and the other following the ceremony. The bride was most becomingly attired in a light blue silk taffeta. She wore a veil which was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. Miss Marguerite Fohl was attired in pink georgette with hat to match. Miss Vera Walters wore lavender taffeta with hat to match. The bride and groom, following congratulations from their friends were escorted to the Lutheran parsonage and later the bridal party took dinner at the Boggis. The private dining room was most artistically decorated in yellow and white. Roses, carnations and dahlias predominated and formed a beautiful setting for a wedding party. The young couple following the dinner took a motor trip to Columbus. They were showered with flowers and rice by their friends. Misses Mary Vieth Miss Alice Staley and Miss Helen M. Wotler, of Columbus, were among the out of town guests.

RODEO SHOW TUESDAY NIGHT PERFORMANCE

Several new features will be introduced at tonight's performance of King Bros., rodeo, showing at Mason's ball park under the auspices of the local lodge of Eagles. At the request of several old time showmen who live in Circleville the cowboys and cowgirls will put on what is known as a chase for a bride and a quadrille on horseback.

W. H. Heiter, Montana resident who is here with the Dominion Construction company, will again ride bucking horses in opposition to Colonel King's cowboys and several Circleville boys will endeavor to ride the bucking steers and the bucking mules.

The last performance will be given tomorrow night, and then the show with its people, horses and long horned cattle will entrain for Columbia, South Carolina, where the Rodeo will be the feature attraction at the State fair.

This Hustling Age

Of course we are all the creatures of our age. The luxuries of yesterday become the needs of today. If we were suddenly transported into the days of our grandparents, we would find the manner of life unbearable. They traveled by stage or on foot, and arrived on time. Today the fastest express trains scarcely meet our needs, and we are continually seeking for faster means of transportation and communication.

AMUSEMENTS

Lon Chaney—man of a thousand faces—has given the screen a new disguise. He has disguised a human soul instead of a human face—this is the secret of "Mr. Wu."

Chaney transformed himself into a Chinaman in the stupendous new drama now playing at the Met theater; he used his uncanny tricks of makeup of course—but the significant fact was not his face, painted to portray one of another race.

His walk, his every little action—in fact, his very personality, turned Chinese for the picture. It is said that he did it by studying Chinese customs, philosophy, literature, until he actually thought from a Chinese standpoint.

After seeing "Mr. Wu" this is not difficult to believe.

It is a mighty character—this Chinese mandarin, wise in the wisdom of ages of Chinese lore; wise in the newer wisdom of a European college; a grim nemesis pursuing, with implacable hatred and the certainty of doom, the English family from which he had suffered wrong. Walker Whiteside gave the world the character on the stage—but Chaney goes much further in his delineation. He seems the living embodiment of the whole mysterious Orient.

Renee Adoree plays a Chinese girl his daughter. Her make-up is no less complicated than Chaney's. The big scene is between Chaney and Louise Dresser, playing the English mother, in the desperate duel of wits wherein she pits a woman's intuition against the ancient wisdom of China to save her son's life.

Gertrude Olmsted plays the daughter, and looks beautiful. Ralph Forbes gives a splendidly balanced characterization as the son, whose misdeeds precipitates the mighty dramatic situation of the play.

Anna May Wong is convincing as the Chinese cousin, and Claude King as Muir, the old tutor of the mandarin, has a role he handles with consummate skill. Others in the cast are Mrs. Wong Wing, Holmes Herbert, Kao Mao, and others of note.

William Nigh, who directed "The Fire Brigade," directed the spectacular new play.

Distance Lure

I have heard it said of a great painting, "Don't go too close to it." In order to get the best out of a picture view it in the proper light and from a distance. If you got too close to look you will realize the rough way in which it is made. . . . "I prefer (now) to also view women from a distance; never closer than four or five feet.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

TELEVISION TOO SLOW YET TO BE PRACTICAL

But Short Step Now Towards Seeing by Radio

New York.—Forty thousand electric impulses a second, riding wireless waves which travel 180,000 miles a second—that is radio television today, and still it is not fast enough to be practical.

Now that the transatlantic beam radio transmission and television have been accomplished, laymen may regard it as a short step to the time when scenes and speeches from a Geneva peace conference can be carried into their homes.

But the scientists and engineers who are intrusted with the task of bringing about something of that sort are doubtful. They point out a multitude of obstacles, and say that general use of television, especially for big scenes, may never be practical. Yet while they doubt they are industriously attempting to remove the obstacles of television for such practical organizations as the Radio Corporation of America and the American Bell Telephone company.

In Actual Use.

Beam transmission for messages and photographs is not only practical; it is in actual use for messages from London to Cape Town, Canada and Australia. This autumn the Radio corporation will put a beam line into operation between London and New York, in addition to its "undirected" broadcasting lines.

But the beam, which takes only about one-fourth as much power as generally radiated broadcasting, is not the slim pencil of energy visualized by amateur prophets. It is rather a cone, which spreads so much in traveling 3,000 miles across the Atlantic that nobody really knows how broad it is at the base.

The power picked up at the end of the line is too weak to overcome interference sufficiently for flawless work in the delicate task of transmitting scenes of persons and things in motion—but that is probably one of the minor obstacles which will be dissolved with time. Increased speed of transmission may prove to be the real solution of the problem.

The Radio corporation has machines which can send and receive 250 words per minute, about eight times as many as the human operators can send and receive, over ether waves that travel with the speed of light. This speed of transmission gives secrecy to messages.

But television requires a speed that makes 250 words a minute seem nothing at all. Using a transmitter that would fill a fair sized room—and size of equipment is one of the minor obstacles to commercial television at present—the best available apparatus of the Bell Telephone laboratories manages to transmit over wires or ether waves a picture about three inches square. Engineers consider this far too small a space to portray a king's coronation or a football game.

2,500 Dots on Picture.

The three-inch picture consists of 2,500 dots of light and darkness, flashed on the screen separately, but so fast that the eye seems to see them all at once. To get motion into the picture, at least sixteen slightly different scenes must be flashed on the screen each second, each reproduced from the source by a separate electrical impulse. The dots have been enlarged to a maximum that gives a blurred picture two feet square, but the picture loses clarity with each amplification.

To transmit these "dot" impulses, energy for synchronization of machines and for a conversation, requires facilities that would carry four to six telephone conversations. Enlargements would be possible by dividing a scene, for instance, into quarter sections, transmitting each section as a separate picture and then recombining them as a single view. But this would require four transmitters, with transmission facilities for sixteen to twenty telephone conversations, or, if sent by air, it would occupy the ether wave bands of sixteen radio stations, and it would transmit scenes one way only.

Greater speed in transmission, a speed so nearly incomprehensible that it may never be attainable, is perhaps the secret of television on a broad scale. One hundred and sixty thousand impulses per second, each reproducing a spot of light or darkness, would theoretically give a picture four times as large, and more dots would give larger scenes in proportion. But cautious scientists refuse to say more than that it "might be possible," and that it "might solve this particular part of the whole problem." Meantime experts in the telephone laboratories are trying to find out just what needs to be done and what can be done to make television commercially practical.

IT IS HEARST

His Arch Enemy, to Whom Al Smith Should Be Most Grateful!

Had it not been for the enmity of William Randolph Hearst, who goaded him into his first gestures of independence and caused him in 1922, to defy Tammany Hall, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York might still be known solely as an organization politician. Such, at least, is the theory offered in "Alfred E. Smith, a Critical Study," by Henry F. Pringle, published by Macy-Masius of New York.

This, the first critical biography of the man who is now probably the leading candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, is expected to cause a certain amount of irritation among the strategists who are working for Smith. It goes in detail into the New York Governor's prohibition record and declares that until almost 1915 he was a Tammany Hall "henchman" in the New York State Legislature at Albany. It reveals that he has been a consistent wet, but that lately he has listened to his advisers who have pointed out the danger of losing the South unless this part of his record is forgotten. Consequently he has had little to say, in recent years, on this troublesome subject.

On the other hand, Governor Smith is described as an extraordinarily able executive, a man with great capacities for hard work and one who has mastered the intricate problems of New York state government better, perhaps, than any other governor in history. Mr. Pringle, while expressing no views as to whether Smith is qualified for the presidency, remarks that he has in the past shown himself capable of great growth. He is now the dominant figure in Tammany Hall and no longer forced to obey the commands of the organization.

"When did Al Smith begin to look slightly askance at the practical leaders of Tammany Hall and turn, instead, to other minds?" writes Mr. Pringle in referring to the break with Hearst. "I offer the theory that it would never have happened at all had not a newspaper owner called him a 'baby killer' and so inflamed the Irish sentimentality that is part of him. It was William Randolph Hearst who aroused his emotions to the point where he forgot both expediency and practical politics — and thereby was practically beyond the dimmest dream of his party or himself. It must be a depressing thought to Mr. Hearst, as he sits in the sunshine of his California ranch and reflects that his name no longer is of political consequence in New York, to know that partial credit is his for the ascendancy of Alfred E. Smith."

Hearst's attack on Smith as a

"baby killer" took place in 1919, during Smith's first gubernatorial campaign. He published in his newspapers charges that the Governor was responsible for the milk situation in New York City and that children were "dying for lack of milk." Smith the father of five children, struck back at the allegations and from that day on never consented to openly assist Hearst. In 1922 Tammany Hall bowed to Hearst's demand for nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor. Smith was told that he must accept the nomination for United States Senator on the same ticket with the publisher. But at the Syracuse convention that summer Smith defied Charles F. Murphy, then leader, and refused to run with Hearst. In the end the convention stamped for Smith.

"Alfred E. Smith, a Critical Study" is not an attack on Smith. Its purpose is to tell the truth about this man who, like all men in public life, is surrounded by legend and the outpourings of campaign press agents. It is an intimate inside and an actual account of his life, his views, his limitations, his talents, and is also an objective study of the political system in an American state.

Loud Speaker Drives Pests From Orchard

Ordinary scarecrows will frighten away almost any sort of bird that damages crops but common, street variety sparrows are no respecters of scarecrows. Discovering this to his sorrow, Gustav Schmitz, owner of a huge orchard near Hornburg, Germany, has been in despair for some time past, according to the Chicago Tribune, and could only stand by and watch his fruit devoured by hungry hordes of the pesky little birds until he thought of his radio. Moving a raucous loud speaker into the orchard and turning the amplifier on his set up to its fullest pitch he defeated the birds with the first blast of radio sound and at last reports the orchard was still clear.

Growing Demand for Clean Milk

Need for Using Improved Methods in Production Is More Pronounced.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The need for using improved methods in producing the public milk supply becomes more and more pronounced as time goes on, says K. J. Posson, associate market milk specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture. As cities grow larger or become more numerous, the milk supply must necessarily be transported from greater distances and handled in larger quantities. To withstand such treatment it must be produced under the most sanitary conditions.

Furthermore, says Mr. Posson, there is an increasing demand for clean milk on the part of the consumer, and health officials are requiring that improved sanitary methods be used in its production. Unless care is taken in producing it, therefore, great losses may result from the rejection of milk by dealers or health departments and from the lessened demand for low-grade milk. The responsibility for clean milk at the source is placed squarely on the shoulders of the milk producer.

Produce Clean Milk.

By observing certain precautions, clean milk can be produced with very little more effort than milk which is not clean. These precautions are discussed by Mr. Posson in Leaflet No. 3, Improved Sanitation in Milk Production, just issued by the department. The first requirement for clean milk is a herd of healthy cows. Once it is determined by test that the cows are free from tuberculosis and are otherwise healthy, pains should be taken to clean them thoroughly before they are milked. Wiping the udders with a damp cloth removes the danger of contaminating the milk by falling hair and dust particles. Since bacteria cause milk to sour they should be kept out of it by every possible means.

Further precautions in the production of clean milk require that only healthy people be employed in a dairy, that they wear clean clothing, and that milking be performed with clean, dry hands. The use of small-top pails is recommended as a means of reducing the amount of impurities that fall into the milk.

Every dairyman should be certain that he has a pure, safe water supply. Wells should be located on the highest available ground. A separate dairy house or milk room should be provided. Milk to be sold should never be handled in a dwelling as there is too much chance of dangerous contamination in case sickness occurs in the family.

Clean Utensils.

Milk utensils which are not properly washed or sterilized may be the greatest source of contamination. They should be rinsed inside and outside with luke-warm or cold water as soon as possible after use, then placed in a wash vat, scrubbed with a brush in warm water containing a soda ash or alkaline washing powder (not soap, rinsed placed in a sterilizing cabinet, and thoroughly steamed.

The best way to prevent multiplication of bacteria which unavoidably get into the milk is to cool the milk as soon as possible after it is produced and keep it cold. Bacteria are tiny single-celled plants, which, like most other plants, require warmth to grow. If milk is cooled to 50 degrees F. or below and held at that temperature, bacterial development is very much retarded. Milk should not only be kept cold until it leaves the farm but should also be protected from the sun and warm air while being transported from farm to city.

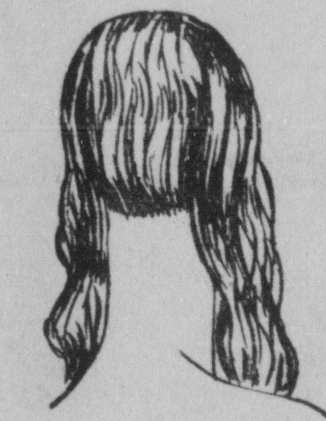

A copy of the leaflet may be secured by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Value of Wood Ashes as a Fertilizer Will Vary

The value of wood ashes as a fertilizer varies considerably, depending upon whether or not they have been leached, kind of wood they came from, method of burning, etc. Good quality wood ashes contain 5 to 7 per cent potash and 1.5 to 2 per cent of phosphoric acid. If the ashes have been leached by lying out in the weather they may contain not more than 1 per cent of potash and an equal amount of phosphoric acid. The amount of calcium will vary from 20 to 50 per cent but it usually runs between 30 and 35 per cent. By way of comparison high grade ground limestone may contain as much as 98 per cent calcium compounds.

Blanching Celery While Growing Is Best Method

If celery is not blanched while growing the green stalks can never be fully blanched. The common method of blanching and perhaps the best way is to hill up the growing celery as it grows, with earth. It will blanch slightly when stored in a cellar or if grown in pots and placed in the cellar, but when stored for winter most of the white stalks are new growth made by moving materials from the older stalks and leaves to form the newer stalks and leaves. This new growth will be practically white when the sun does not shine on them.

GOOD QUALITIES IN DIRTY-FACED BOYS

Dirty-faced youths make excellent office boys when given a good scrubbing, the Westminster (London) juvenile employment advisory committee has concluded after numerous experiments.

Some employers prefer dirty-faced boys to begin with. One employer wrote to the committee: "I want an honest little tough with rather dirty knees and a soiled face and thorough understanding that life is a struggle and the devil take the hindmost. I prefer them (i. e., boys, not devils) to be short, sturdily built, either fair and dirty faced, or dark and red faced with just a suspicion of a cold in the head."

The advisory committee, commenting on the request for a "little tough," says: "All employers are not so easy to satisfy, by any means."

VON HINDENBURG HONORED AS A HERO

THIS TIME THE LINE HELD AT BRANDENBURGER GATE

As Millions Paid Tribute To the Great General, Who Is Now President of the Republic of Germany—Thousands Honored the Sturdy, Stalwart Soldier of Ex-Kaiser William's Army Who Celebrated His Eightieth Birthday Anniversary Sunday.

Von Hindenburg was first in the hearts of his countrymen Sunday as never before. Not since William I. led the German armies thru the Brandenburger gate in 1871 on their return from the Franco-Prussian war has Berlin witnessed an ovation like that showered on Paul Von Hindenburg Sunday at Berlin, Germany on the occasion of his eightieth birthday anniversary.

It was primarily a tribute to Von Hindenburg, the man, that found an outlet in the veritable drumfire cheering which echoed and re-echoed along the route which he traversed, but its political significance is set down as a tangible asset to the German republic, for the president's natal day was the signal for a political truce in which his services to the new Germany found free acknowledgment from friend and foe alike.

The colors of the republic predominated in the display of bunting throughout the city.

A warm autumn sun beamed benignly on the octogenarian president as he leisurely motored thru a twelve mile lane, flanked with guards of honor, back of whom men, women and children were massed to the house fronts.

Veteran police officials were inclined to estimate the turnout which applauded the president on the drive to the stadium at not less than 1,000,000. Another 100,000 greeted him in the huge amphitheater, among whom were 40,000 singing school children.

Lifting his top hat and bowing to right and left, Von Hindenburg acknowledged the unending adulations, his face retaining its familiar immobile expression, his form solidly erect.

The president's reply to Chancellor Marx, who voiced greetings in behalf of the government and German people and eulogized the president's devotion to duty and Christian citizenship, was a fervent plea for national unity and reconciliation with the new order of things in Germany.

"My most sincere thanks to you and the government also applies to the entire German people," said President Von Hindenburg, alluding to praise for his service to the fatherland in war and peace.

"It was my duty, my life's work, always devoted to the Fatherland, and I shall continue to serve this end for the span of life still allotted to me, not for honor or personal profit, nor for any party or group, but to serve, and with God's help, to benefit all Germany."

"It is my fondest hope to see our people united. Many Germans, unable to find a connecting link between the past, present and future, are continuing embittered and suspicious toward their neighbors.

"Despite the diverging viewpoints and interests, it should not be so difficult to find a means of uniting us in thought common to the Fatherland connecting all with the land of our forefathers. Respect for the opinion of others, for honorable new methods for glorious past traditions must be the foundation of such unity."

"In this hour, my thoughts turn to our countrymen in the Rhineland, whose liberation from foreign occupation, to our very great disappointment, is not yet perfected. I greet them feelingly, with hope for their speedy freedom, the attainment of which will be the preeminent task of German politics."

"My heart's desire is that all Germany may rise from present adversity in brotherly unity for a future strong, free, consolidated Germany, with which thought I greet the German people in unshaken faith and loyalty."

SHREWD GAME OF POLITICS BY GOVERNOR

Reasons That If He Hopes To Land In White House Should Serve As Senator.

In refusing to permit his name to be used as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination and making his refusal emphatic, Governor Donahey is playing a shrewd political game than he is given credit for.

In his statements declaring he is in no sense a candidate, and must not be considered as one, the governor stresses the fact that he is aware of his limitations. This is generally taken as meaning he feels a lack of ability to fill so great an office as the presidency and give an impression of modesty among the people, all of which is not without its psychological effect for the future.

But what the governor undoubtedly means is that he is not unaware of his present political limitations. He realizes that while having been elected governor for three terms in Ohio, a Republican state, has made him, in a sense, a national character there is not that general knowledge of his capacity thruout the country as to have the needed appeal, if he were to be the candidate for the presidency. He has not traveled extensively and the voters know little of him, except as governor.

He, therefore, reasons logically that the better course to pursue, if the White House is to be reached, is to serve as United States senator for a term at least. There is a feeling this office could be secured. His policy in the senate would be that of the friend of the people, irrespective of political affiliations. This, he reasons, would make him a national character and by natural sequence lead to the presidential nomination later. It is good reasoning and undoubtedly forms the basis for refusal to permit consideration of his name at this time for the higher office.

The governor is a comparatively young man. He can well afford to wait four or even eight years. In the meantime, he can be adding to his political stature and gaining the wider political reputation of which he feels the need.

It is his wish to go to the senate and by the reasoning which he applies, a term or two there, with the opportunities it offers, could lead to the presidential chair and the White House.—George U. Marvin.

Unappreciative Guest

Ralph, three years old, was spending the day with his aunt. Thinking a custard would appeal to him, she inquired if he liked them, at which he answered: "Oh, my, yes." However, upon being served, it fell short of his expectations. He ate a little and, passing it to his aunt, said: "You can have it, Aunt Myra. I am so full, and if you want some water to wash it down, here's my glass."

Not Altogether Aged

There is a woman in our neighborhood who is eighty years of age, but who walks with an erectness and springiness that is the envy of women many years younger than she. PARALYSIS SPREAD ALARMS SCIENCE

Increase Seen as Threat of Epidemic.

Washington.—Are we on the verge of another infantile paralysis epidemic like that of 1916? Late summer and early fall are the times when this little understood disease is most prevalent, but the number of cases reported to the United States public health service in the last few weeks have shown a decided gain over those reported for the same period last year.

The figures for the week ending August 6 show 180 cases as opposed to only 63 for the corresponding week of 1926. Ohio reports several widely scattered cases, while California has 66 for one week alone.

Like influenza, poliomyelitis, as infantile paralysis is known to medical men, is one of the unfinished problems on which scientists are still hard at work. It is believed to be caused by a filterable virus, which is spread by contact with articles that have been touched by the infected person. From the way in which epidemics have spread in the past it is thought that it must be transferred either by animals or human carriers, but at this time little has been definitely established on this point.

In the big epidemic in New York city that occurred eleven years ago it was clearly shown that prompt hospitalization of all cases that could be safely moved checked the spread of the disease more effectively than any other measure. Another outstanding point that emerged from this experience was the fact that isolation of groups of children from contact with other children or adults, even when carried out in the midst of areas where the disease was prevalent, sufficed to protect almost absolutely from infection.

At the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research attempts have been made to immunize monkeys to poliomyelitis but the results were too variable to be useful.

French workers have tried to use pieces of dried spinal cord after the same procedure as that followed in rabies treatment, but the results were too uncertain to be practical. Dr. E. C. Rosenow of the Mayo clinic has used an antistreptococcus serum to treat acute cases, but this has not received any general application.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—(UP)—The Synod of Michigan of the Presbyterian Church concluded its sessions today with addresses by Dr. Moses Breeze and Rev. W. V. Wormer of the Lord's Day Alliance.

A high point in the sessions was reached last night when Dr. Robert E. Speer, moderator of the General Assembly, said the U. S. was a better country in 1927 than it ever had been and that social, religious and political life was on a much higher plane.

Tinsel Weaves to Be Winter Mode

Gold and Silver Effects to Feature Silks, According to Prediction.

Tinsel weaves or gold and silver worked into the pattern in silks have great importance for winter, according to a Paris fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. In one the colored pattern has a gold surface which discloses a snake pattern in certain lights. Two colors or changeable effects are more important than ever, and fine floral patterns and designs in velvets and lames are patterned for frocks, while big patterns are for evening wraps. "Velours diaphane" is Bianchini's new sheer velvet. "Vestale," in silk and wool, is something like a faille, while "cotele feffe" is akin to "flaminga," but with heavier ridges. "Turlah" reminds one of a satin-back marocain, with marked waves in its ridged surface on the rougher side, and "troubadour" is another ridged fabric in silk and wool, which looks like a cross between ottoman and a fine pique.

In one of the lames the design is in conventional leaves, which form small lozenges and group to make big ones which alternate in gold and silver. Fruit patterns are developed to alternate with those in floral designs. Degraded velvets as from white to black are matched by a moire patterned silk with satin back. Both white and gold or silver and black and gold are important color combinations in the tinsels, while blues and silver are shown for youthful evening wear. Gold threads make the trousers stripe patterns in silks.

Plain woollens treated with metal, especially gold, many jerseys, scratched and velvety woollens and new weaves and patterns in "kashatulla" are important in the Rodier collection of woollens, while the kasha family has grown considerably and printed "fusil-kasha" is one of the important media for winter. "Vella diallie" names one of the soft, loose velvety weaves, with the nap slightly scratched. "Lissicrepella" is lighter than crepella, while "kashavelline" is smoother and thicker than the velvety vella diallie. "Givabure" is a coarse diagonal weave for sports clothes, often in two colors and at least two tones. "Vellor angora" is gold on one side and velvety angora on the other, and "kasha givror" is the same on both sides, shot with gold. A variation of this shows the gold in marbled effect.

Kashatulla is worked with flowers in gold and in tones darker than the background. "Kashatullor" implies much gold in the pattern, and "vella kashatulla" suggests that one side is smooth and velvety. Double weaves, made very loose in kashatulla, look as if a thread of one color had been thrown over another in a ring which suggests hand knitting. Jerseys or "djersas" are featherweight in lightness, combined with gold, made in lacy patterns, fashioned with many types of irregular stripes, as in two tones of green with white or in two tones of blue. A thicker and wider rib in jersey is called "djersakashabure." Solid gold jersey looks like coat-of-mail and "zebror djersakasha" reminds one of a zebra, and other patterns are watered in effects. Rodier's new things are thicker and look like pearls designed in two tones and plain colors.

An experiment has been undertaken at the cemetery of San Jose, in Spain, for the installation of tiny telephones in each coffin. These are to be connected to an alarm bell in the porter's lodge, thus providing against the possibility of anyone being buried alive.

JUDGE BLOSSER MAY HERE THE RUM CASE

Judge Peter J. Blosser is not disqualified to hear and determine liquor cases because he is a taxpayer, the District Court of Appeals has ruled. The decision was handed down in the case of Jess Fain, plaintiff in error versus the State of Ohio, defendant in error.

Fain was convicted by Judge Blosser of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor. His attorneys, Day and Rais, filed a motion to dismiss the case on the ground that Blosser was a taxpayer and therefore interested in the outcome from a pecuniary standpoint. Their contention was that under the U. S. Supreme Court's ruling in the now famous Tumey case, any court with a pecuniary interest in the outcome of a case was disqualified. Because part of the fine and costs in the Fain case would go to the general fund of the county and because Judge Blosser was a taxpayer, the defense attorneys contended that he was pecuniarily interested and therefore disqualified.

Commenting upon the case the appeals court decision reads: "No record that the judge was a taxpayer as charged is included in the evidence, therefore the question was not properly presented. Assuming that the said judge was a taxpayer, it does not follow that he was for that reason disqualified."

The disqualification aimed at in the Tumey case was one arising from an individual and personal pecuniary interest as distinguished from the interest held in common by all citizens who are taxpayers in matters regarding public revenues and taxations.

The objection here made, if allowed, would render all judges and citizens incompetent to act in any criminal case. Such a situation was not intended to nor does it follow the rule announced in the Tumey case.

The Appellate Court affirmed Judge Blosser's decision in the Fain case. Day and Rais laid similar lines for appeal in various other liquor cases, making the same claim that Judge Blosser, as a taxpayer, was disqualified from hearing or determining the case in point. The decision announced nullifies appeals in these other cases.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

BIRDS IN CAPITAL FOR TOUR TO SOUTH

Flock Into Washington From Nearby States.

Washington.—Thousands of feath-
ery members of the Purple Martin society have flocked to Washington from
nearby states for their annual convention, preparatory to embarking on
their usual winter tour of South America.

The birds have selected as their
meeting place the wires atop the poles
on Floral street, between Thirteenth street and Alaska avenue, where they
hold early morning and night sessions
to the wonderment of residents of the
vicinity and passing motorists.

The other morning they rested side
by side on the wires for a distance of
two blocks, later taking off for an inspection tour and "bird's-eye" view
of the city. In the evening they return again and one of these mornings
they are going to adjourn suddenly
and begin their flight southward, according to Dr. C. W. Richmond of the division of birds, Smithsonian institution.

Doctor Richmond points out that
the martins seem to have selected the
national capital as an annual meeting
place in the late summer. In previous years they have held their sessions at
different points around town, one year
selecting the elm trees near the Pan-
American building, another year using the trees near the botanic garden
and still another year meeting on Rhode Island avenue in the northeast
section.

"After assembling from nearby
places and from Virginia, Maryland,
Pennsylvania and other sections near
Washington, they usually hang around
for a few days before suddenly taking
off in one group for the South," Doctor Richmond stated. "They will take
up winter quarters probably in South America. Sometimes they number
from 10,000 to 20,000 birds, according
to various estimates."

Other large flocks meet in other cities about this time of year. Doctor Richmond said, and they, too, will
journey to warmer climes.

While the exact date of departure
of the visitors on Floral street can
only be guessed, it appeared certain
that leaders of the flock will see that
the migration begins before the hunting season opens.

Housewives, Here Are Ways to Win Blue Ribbons at Your County Fair

By Kathryn St. John

Making cakes for exhibition at
the County Fair is not really very
different from the making of good
cakes at home. The home cook will,
of course, do her utmost to make
the best-looking and best-tasting
cake.

It must be remembered that texture and flavor are the two high-
scoring points. The former is controlled by the method of mixing and
baking, while the latter depends
upon the proportion of the ingredients used and their quality.

The making of a cake for the County Fair is not a hit-or-miss
proposition. A definite and well-tried recipe should be followed. The
butter used must be strictly fresh,
and the younger the eggs, the bet-
ter. Evaporated milk imparts flavor
and keeping qualities to cake and
the housewife will be assured of
success if she uses it in making the icing.

Spice Cake

½ cup fat 4 tbsp. evaporated
1 cup sugar milk diluted with 2 eggs 6 tbsp. water
1½ cups pastry 1 tsp. cinnamon
flour ½ tsp. nutmeg
3 tsp. baking ½ tsp. cloves powder Few grains cayenne ¼ tsp. salt 1½ tbsp. boiling
water

Soak spices in boiling water.
Sift flour with baking powder and
salt twice. Cream fat and sugar
thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs
and continue beating until the mixture is a light color and has a smooth, fluffy appearance. Add
spices, then the flour and diluted
milk alternately, beginning and
ending with flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Bake at 375° F.
(medium oven).

Yield: 2 round tins or 10 servings.

Caramel Fudge Icing

2½ cups granulated ¼ cup evaporated
sugar milk diluted with ½ cup hot water ¼ cup water
¼ tsp. salt 1 tbsp. butter
¼ tsp. vanilla

Caramelize ½ of the sugar by sifting it slowly into a hot frying
pan. Shake the pan constantly to prevent burning. The sugar should
melt about as fast as it is put in.
When it is melted and a light, amber color, add the ¼ cup of hot water
and boil until caramel dissolves and
a thin syrup is formed. Add the
syrup to the diluted milk with the

Help for "Rickety" Babies

Dried milk that has been treated with ultra-violet light is the most practical of the irradiated foods that have been used to prevent rickets in babies, in the opinion of Dr. Alfred F. Hess, an authority on rickets. "It is the unanimous opinion that dried milk treated in this way prevents or cures infantile rickets and tetany," asserted Doctor Hess in a report to the American Medical association.
"The specific gravity of the milk is maintained for a period of at least six weeks."

rest of the sugar, and the salt. Boil
to the soft ball stage or 113° C.
(236° F.). Cool until lukewarm.
Add the vanilla and beat vigorously
until creamy and stiff enough to spread. Yield: Sufficient for 2
double layer cakes.

Prune Cake

½ cup fat 5 tbsp. water
1 cup sugar 1 tsp. cinnamon
2 eggs ½ tsp. nutmeg
1½ cups pastry ½ tsp. cloves
flour Few grains
3 tsp. baking cayenne powder 1½ tbsp. boiling
¼ tsp. salt water
1 cup chopped cooked prunes

Soak spices in boiling water.
Sift flour with baking powder and
salt twice. Cream fat and sugar
thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs
and continue beating until the mixture is a light color and has a smooth, fluffy appearance. Add
spices, then the flour and diluted

Prune Whip Icing

1½ cups prunes 1 cup evaporated
2 cups cold water milk
Few grains salt 1 cup whipping
2 tbsp. lemon juice cream
6 tbsp. sugar

Soak prunes over night in cold
water. Cook 5 minutes, add sugar
and salt and cook two minutes
longer. Remove prunes from their liquid and pit. There should be 1½ cups of chopped prunes. Then
add lemon juice and let cool. Combine evaporated milk and cream
and whip until stiff. Fold
prunes gently into the whipped cream and spread between layers
of cake.

First Transatlantic Flight Was the Fastest

New York.—Contrary to the belief
of most newspaper readers, nonstop
airplane flights across the Atlantic
not only have failed to hang up any
speed records in 1927, but actually
have fallen short of the mark set eight
years ago by the first plane to blaze
this trail. A comparison of times and
distance in this field follows:

1919—Alcock and Brown, from St.
Johns, N. F., to Clifden, Ireland, 1,931
miles in 161.5 hours; average speed,
120.9 miles an hour.

1927—Lindbergh, from Roosevelt
Field, L. I., to Paris, France, 3,610
miles in 33½ hours; average speed, 107.7 miles an hour.

Chamberlin, from Roosevelt Field
to Plymouth, England, 3,425 miles, in 34 hours; average speed, 100.7 miles
an hour.

Byrd, from Roosevelt Field to Brest,
France, 3,524 miles in 33½ hours;
average speed, 105.2 miles an hour.

Brock and Schlee, from Harbor
Grace, N. F., to Plymouth, England,
2,150 miles in 191.3 hours; average
speed, 111.4 miles an hour.

Power Only in Reason

One fact stands out in bold relief in
the history of man's attempt for betterment. That is, when compulsion is used, only resentment is aroused, and
the end is not gained. Only through moral suasion and appeal to men's
reason can a movement succeed.—

Fully Six Thousand People From All Over the Country Met Sunday Afternoon At Famous Tree Where Chief Logan Delivered His Eloquent, Pathetic Speech More Than One Hundred and Fifty Years Ago—Orator of the Day Was Koo-tut-pah-he-too, a Pawnee Indian—John F. Carlisle Presided and Mr. Cameron Recited Address—Adelphi Band Furnished the Music—Day Was Ideal and No Accidents Marred the Pleasure of Meeting—Reception At Home of Dr. and Mrs. Jones.

The 153d anniversary of the day that Logan, chief of the Mingoes, made his immortal speech under the famous Logan Elm, and the third anniversary of the Ohio Historical association, was duly celebrated Sunday afternoon with a fine program of speeches intermingled with a fine band concert given by the Community band, of Adelphi.

Koo-tut-pah-he-too, as he is known to his Indian friends, and which means "Peaceful Bear," was the main attraction. His family name is Ralph Allen and he is a student at Denison university at Granville.

A crowd estimated at six thousand people were curious to see the Indian and hear him talk, and he did not disappoint his big audience, altho he was somewhat late and did not appear until a portion of the program had been rendered. Mrs. Howard Jones, the president of the Ohio History Day association, was somewhat worried and was fearful that the great-grandson of the hereditary chief of the Pawnee tribe would not show up. He explained that his tardiness was due to the action of his Ford.

John F. Carlisle, of Columbus, who presided, filled in the program by introducing Lawrence Cameron, senior sagamore of the Deerfoot tribe of Red Men of Columbus, who is the possessor of an excellent voice, and who recited Longfellow's Hiawatha. In his rendition, you could almost see Minnehaha (Laughing Water). Mr. Cameron has a most excellent memory and his enunciation is almost perfect.

The stellar attraction, Koo-tut-pah-he-too, is a man of small stature and weighs about 130 pounds. He has the prominent nose and features of the real Redskins. He was attired in Indian dress and made a most favorable impression.

In beginning he told his audience that he would try to express the feelings within him, and he first sang several Indian songs; "By the Waters of Minnetonka," a Sioux serenade "a love song," "From the Land of Sky Blue Waters," and a song his grandmother used to sing, entitled "True Speaking to Each Other." The Indian has a low contralto voice and his songs were barely audible to the major portion of the crowd, as the breeze carried his voice from, instead of to, his audience. The same notes one hears in the songs of the Hawaiians and other members of the Malay race, were discernible in the singing of Koo-tut-pah-he-too.

His theme was, "The Indian of Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." He said we are pictured as a horde of painted barbarians. Christopher Columbus, in his first letter to his sovereign queen, said that there is not a better people than these. The first word he interpreted from the Indian was the word, "welcome." The speaker said, I do not come to you as an alien, but as one of the aboriginals. We introduced to the white man; cotton, tobacco and corn, America's three main crops, the three great money makers. His knowledge of wood lore is an acquisition of civilization. The Indian produced two of your great generals, Logan and Parker. In the Spanish-American war, eighty-five per cent of the Indian population volunteered to fight, which was a larger ratio than any other race, and they also subscribed for $25,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds in the World war. The Indian never broke a treaty, they left that to the whites. The Indian language does not contain a profane word and the Indian has not produced an individual who has been a menace to free government.

The Indian is pictured today sitting on a drooping horse and he is described as the vanishing race. He is not vanishing, he is increasing in numbers. We are buckling on the armor of civilization, we are building on a sturdy foundation, and there are no limits or heights to which we may not aspire. Strong of mind and with the physique of our forefathers, we are especially adapted to attain accomplishments denied our forefathers. The Indian in time will aspire to true American citizenship.

Following the ceremonies in the park, a reception was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones at Park Place, where the people had an opportunity to meet Koo-tut-pah-he-too, who favored them with a short talk and sang some of the Indian songs.

Among those present at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Schoedinger, Mr. and Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Samuel Rindsfoos, Mr. and Mrs. Siesel Rindsfoos and Mrs. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Galbreath, Mr. John F. Carlisle and daughters, of Columbus; Mr. George F. Barries, of Canal Winchester and Mrs. Sittler of Lancaster.

The entire celebration was a great success, due in a large measure to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Jones, the president of the association.

Notes.

Charles Humes, aged 91, a member of Tioga tribe, 91, of Mechaicsburg accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stanley and daughter, Mary, and thirty members of his home lodge were present at the anniversary.

Elza Walston, of Ashland, Kentucky, looked on at the celebration.

John F. Carlisle, who presided, made mention of the fact that on Saturday, October 8, The Ohio Archaeological association, which made possible the celebration of this famous tree, will hold a state meet at the Ohio State University which will be open to everybody. Dr. G. Clyde Fisher, curator and Archie Butler Hurlburt, will be the speakers.

Mr. Carlisle said that the grenadier squaw was six feet, three inches tall and that she was a sister of the brilliant Chief Cornstalk, and that she ruled over her own tribe, and was a remarkable woman in her day.

Dr. J. F. Baldwin and family, of Columbus, were among visitors at the celebration.

Lawrence Cameron, Joseph H. Cameron, Miss Zina Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Sterling, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moore of Columbus, attended the Ohio History day celebration Sunday.

F. E. Thompson, an honorary chief of the Deerfoot tribe of Indians, was an interesting spectator at the celebration.

flowers and rice by their friends. Misses Mary Vieth Miss Alice Staley and Miss Helen M. Wotler, of Columbus, were among the out of town guests.

Siamese Superstition

At the birth of a child in Slam, a cord that has been blessed by the priests is tied around the outside of the house, and three balls of rice are thrown in "lucky directions" by three old women, who are always present at such a time and whose business it is to solicit for the little one the patronage and protection of sundry guardian angels.

RODEO SHOW TUSEDAY NIGHT PERFORMANCE

Several new features will be introduced at tonight's performance of King Bros., rodeo, showing at Mason's ball park under the auspices of the local lodge of Eagles. At the request of several old time showmen who live in Circleville the cowboys and cowgirls will put on what is known as a chase for a bride and a quadrille on horseback.

W. H. Heiter, Montana resident who is here with the Dominion Construction company, will again ride bucking horses in opposition to Colonel King's cowboys and several Circleville boys will endeavor to ride the bucking steers and the bucking mules.

The last performance will be given tomorrow night, and then the show with its people, horses and long horned cattle will entrain for Columbia, South Carolina, where the Rodeo will be the feature attraction at the State fair.

This Hustling Age

Of course we are all the creatures of our age. The luxuries of yesterday become the needs of today. If we were suddenly transported into the days of our grandparents, we would find the manner of life unbearable. They traveled by stage or on foot, and arrived on time. Today the fastest express trains scarcely meet our needs, and we are continually seeking for faster means of transportation and communication.

BLACKSTONE.

The greatest magician the world has ever known will make an escape from a packing box made by the Circleville Lumber company and then nailed down by their carpenters at the Grand opera house Wednesday, October 5, and Mr. Gilliland defies Blackstone to escape from same after his men has made this box secure. Same is now on exhibition at the Ohio utilities office and may be examined at your leisure. This is just one of the many tricks that the Great Black stone will perform during his three day engagement in this city. Don't fail to see the great illusion "The Vanishing Horse" in the Oriental Nights and the many other mystifying tricks, with his big company of twenty people and a car load of special scenery and effects; October 3, 4, and 5.

AMUSEMENTS

Lon Chaney—man of a thousand faces—has given the screen a new disguise. He has disguised a human soul instead of a human face—this is the secret of "Mr. Wu."

Chaney transformed himself into a Chinaman in the stupendous new drama now playing at the Met theater; he used his uncanny tricks of makeup of course—but the significant fact was not his face, painted to portray one of another race.

His walk, his every little action—in fact, his very personality, turned Chinese for the picture. It is said that he did it by studying Chinese customs, philosophy, literature, until he actually thought from a Chinese standpoint.

After seeing "Mr. Wu" this is not difficult to believe.

It is a mighty character—this Chinese mandarin, wise in the wisdom of ages of Chinese lore; wise in the newer wisdom of a European college; a grim nemesis pursuing, with implacable hatred and the certainty of doom, the English family from which he had suffered wrong. Walker Whiteside gave the world the character on the stage—but Chaney goes much further in his delineation. He seems the living embodiment of the whole mysterious Orient.

Renee Adoree plays a Chinese girl his daughter. Her make-up is no less complicated than Chaney's. The big scene is between Chaney and Louise Dresser, playing the English mother, in the desperate duel of wits wherein she pits a woman's intuition against the ancient wisdom of China to save her son's life.

Gertrude Olmsted plays the daughter, and looks beautiful. Ralph Forbes gives a splendidly balanced characterization as the son, whose misdeeds precipitates the mighty dramatic situation of the play.

Anna May Wong is convincing as the Chinese cousin, and Claude King as Muir, the old tutor of the mandarin, has a role he handles with consummate skill. Others in the cast are Mrs. Wong Wing, Holmes Herbert, Kao Mao, and others of note.

William Nigh, who directed "The Fire Brigade," directed the spectacular new play.

Distance Lure

I have heard it said of a great painting, "Don't go too close to it." In order to get the best out of a picture view it in the proper light and from a distance. If you got too close to look you will realize the rough way in which it is made. . . . "I prefer (now) to also view women from a distance; never closer than four or five feet.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The marriage of Miss Evangeline Troutman, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Mrs. George J. Troutman, to Rev. George Schuster, rector in charge of Martin Luther Lutheran church, Columbus, was solemnized Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church, this city. The bride's attendants were Miss Marguerite Fohl and Miss Vera Walters, Gladden Troutman acted as best man and George Troutman gave the bride in marriage. Rev. George J. Troutman, father of the bride, performed the marriage using the full ring ceremony. The bridal party marched to the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. William Gulden. Little Anna Marie Feldmeth, of Butler, Pennsylvania, a cousin of the bride was the ringbearer and Norma Jean Brown was the flower girl. Rev A. Schalls

the Capital university, acted as ushers. Rev. Ellis Snyder sang two hymns and also "Oh, Perfect Love." Miss Barthelmas sang two hymns, one before and the other following the ceremony. The bride was most becomingly attired in a light blue silk taffeta. She wore a veil which was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. Miss Marguerite Fohl was attired in pink georgette with hat to match. Miss Vera Walters wore lavender taffeta with hat to match. The bride and groom, following congratulations from their friends were escorted to the Lutheran parsonage and later the bridal party took dinner at the Boggs. The private dining room was most artistically decorated in yellow and white. Roses, carnations and dahlias predominated and formed a beautiful setting for a wedding party.. The young couple following the dinner took a motor trip to Columbus. They were showered with flowers and rice by their friends. Misses Mary Vieth Miss Alice Staley and Miss Helen M. Wotler, of Columbus, were among the out of town guests.

TELEVISION TOO SLOW YET TO BE PRACTICAL

But Short Step Now Towards Seeing by Radio

New York.—Forty thousand electric impulses a second, riding wireless waves which travel 186,000 miles a second—that is radio television today, and still it is not fast enough to be practical.

Now that the transatlantic beam radio transmission and television have been accomplished, laymen may regard it as a short step to the time when scenes and speeches from a Geneva peace conference can be carried into their homes.

But the scientists and engineers who are intrusted with the task of bringing about something of that sort are doubtful. They point out a multitude of obstacles, and say that general use of television, especially for big scenes, may never be practical. Yet while they doubt they are industriously attempting to remove the obstacles of television for such practical organizations as the Radio Corporation of America and the American Bell Telephone company.

In Actual Use.

Beam transmission for messages and photographs is not only practical; it is in actual use for messages from London to Cape Town, Canada and Australia. This autumn the Radio corporation will put a beam line into operation between London and New York, in addition to its "undirected" broadcasting lines.

But the beam, which takes only about one-fourth as much power as generally radiated broadcasting, is not the slim pencil of energy visualized by amateur prophets. It is rather a cone, which spreads so much in traveling 3,000 miles across the Atlantic that nobody really knows how broad it is at the base.

The power picked up at the end of the line is too weak to overcome interference sufficiently for flawless work in the delicate task of transmitting scenes of persons and things in motion—but that is probably one of the minor obstacles which will be dissolved with time. Increased speed of transmission may prove to be the real solution of the problem.

The Radio corporation has machines which can send and receive 250 words per minute, about eight times as many as the human operators can send and receive, over ether waves that travel with the speed of light. This speed of transmission gives secrecy to messages.

But television requires a speed that makes 250 words a minute seem nothing at all. Using a transmitter that would fill a fair sized room—and size of equipment is one of the minor obstacles to commercial television at present—the best available apparatus of the Bell Telephone laboratories manages to transmit over wires or ether waves a picture about three inches square. Engineers consider this far too small a space to portray a king's coronation or a football game.

2,500 Dots on Picture.

The three-inch picture consists of 2,500 dots of light and darkness, flashed on the screen separately, but so fast that the eye seems to see them all at once. To get motion into the picture, at least sixteen slightly different scenes must be flashed on the screen each second, each reproduced from the source by a separate electrical impulse. The dots have been enlarged to a maximum that gives a blurred picture two feet square, but the picture loses clarity with each amplification.

To transmit these "dot" impulses, energy for synchronization of machines and for a conversation, requires facilities that would carry four to six telephone conversations. Enlargements would be possible by dividing a scene, for instance, into quarter sections, transmitting each section as a separate picture and then recombining them as a single view. But this would require four transmitters, with transmission facilities for sixteen to twenty telephone conversations, or, if sent by air, it would occupy the ether wave bands of sixteen radio stations, and it would transmit scenes one way only.

Greater speed in transmission, a speed so nearly incomprehensible that it may never be attainable, is perhaps the secret of television on a broad scale. One hundred and sixty thousand impulses per second, each reproducing a spot of light or darkness, would theoretically give a picture four times as large, and more dots would give larger scenes in proportion. But cautious scientists refuse to say more than that it "might be possible," and that it "might solve this particular part of the whole problem." Meantime experts in the telephone laboratories are trying to find out just what needs to be done and what can be done to make television commercially practical.

IT IS HEARST

His Arch Enemy, to Whom Al Smith Should Be Most Grateful!

Had it not been for the enmity of William Randolph Hearst, who goaded him into his first gestures of independence and caused him in 1922, to defy Tammany Hall, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York might still be known solely as an organization politician. Such, at least, is the theory offered in "Alfred E. Smith, a Critical Study," by Henry F. Pringle, published by Macy-Masius of New York.

This, the first critical biography of the man who is now probably the leading candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, is expected to cause a certain amount of irritation among the strategists who are working for Smith. It goes in detail into the New York Governor's prohibition record and declares that until almost 1915 he was a Tammany Hall "henchman" in the New York State Legislature at Albany. It reveals that he has been a consistent wet, but that lately he has listened to his advisers who have pointed out the danger of losing the South unless this part of his record is forgotten. Consequently he has had little to say, in recent years, on this troublesome subject.

On the other hand, Governor Smith is described as an extraordinarily able executive, a man with great capacities for hard work and one who has mastered the intricate problems of New York state government better, perhaps, than any other governor in history. Mr. Pringle, while expressing no views as to whether Smith is qualified for the presidency, remarks that he has in the past shown himself capable of great growth. He is now the dominant figure in Tammany Hall and no longer forced to obey the commands of the organization.

"When did Al Smith begin to look slightly askance at the practical leaders of Tammany Hall and turn, instead, to other minds?" writes Mr. Pringle in referring to the break with Hearst. "I offer the theory that it would never have happened at all had not a newspaper owner called him a 'baby killer' and so inflamed the Irish sentimentality that is part of him. It was William Randolph Hearst who aroused his emotions to the point where he forgot both expediency and practical politics—and thereby was practically beyond the dimmest dream of his party or himself. It must be a depressing thought to Mr. Hearst, as he sits in the sunshine of his California ranch and reflects that his name no longer is of political consequence in New York, to know that partial credit is his for the ascendancy of Alfred E. Smith."

Hearst's attack on Smith as a

"baby killer" took place in 1919, during Smith's first gubernatorial campaign. He published in his newspapers charges that the Governor was responsible for the milk situation in New York City and that children were "dying for lack of milk." Smith the father of five children, struck back at the allegations and from that day on never consented to openly assist Hearst. In 1922 Tammany Hall bowed to Hearst's demand for nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor. Smith was told that he must accept the nomination for United States Senator on the same ticket with the publisher. But at the Syracuse convention that summer Smith defied Charles F. Murphy, then leader, and refused to run with Hearst. In the end the convention stamped for Smith.

"Alfred E. Smith, a Critical Study" is not an attack on Smith. Its purpose is to tell the truth about this man who, like all men in public life, is surrounded by legend and the outpourings of campaign press agents. It is an intimate inside and an actual account of his life, his views, his limitations, his talents, and is also an objective study of the political system in an American state.

Loud Speaker Drives Pests From Orchard

Ordinary scarecrows will frighten away almost any sort of bird that damages crops but common, street variety sparrows are no respecters of scarecrows. Discovering this to his sorrow, Gustav Schmitz, owner of a huge orchard near Hornburg, Germany, has been in despair for some time past, according to the Chicago Tribune, and could only stand by and watch his fruit devoured by hungry hordes of the pesky little birds until he thought of his radio. Moving a raucous loud speaker into the orchard and turning the amplifier on his set up to its fullest pitch he defeated the birds with the first blast of radio sound and at last reports the orchard was still clear.

Growing Demand for Clean Milk

Need for Using Improved Methods in Production Is More Pronounced.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The need for using improved methods in producing the public milk supply becomes more and more pronounced as time goes on, says R. J. Posson, associate market milk specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture. As cities grow larger or become more numerous, the milk supply must necessarily be transported from greater distances and handled in larger quantities. To withstand such treatment it must be produced under the most sanitary conditions.

Furthermore, says Mr. Posson, there is an increasing demand for clean milk on the part of the consumer, and health officials are requiring that improved sanitary methods be used in its production. Unless care is taken in producing it, therefore, great losses may result from the rejection of milk by dealers or health departments and from the lessened demand for low-grade milk. The responsibility for clean milk at the source is placed squarely on the shoulders of the milk producer.

Produce Clean Milk.

By observing certain precautions, clean milk can be produced with very little more effort than milk which is not clean. These precautions are discussed by Mr. Posson in Leaflet No. 3, Improved Sanitation in Milk Production, just issued by the department. The first requirement for clean milk is a herd of healthy cows. Once it is determined by test that the cows are free from tuberculosis and are otherwise healthy, pains should be taken to clean them thoroughly before they are milked. Wiping the udders with a damp cloth removes the danger of contaminating the milk by falling hair and dust particles. Since bacteria cause milk to sour they should be kept out of it by every possible means.

Further precautions in the production of clean milk require that only healthy people be employed in a dairy, that they wear clean clothing, and that milking be performed with clean, dry hands. The use of small-top pails is recommended as a means of reducing the amount of impurities that fall into the milk.

Every dairyman should be certain that he has a pure, safe water supply. Wells should be located on the highest available ground. A separate dairy house or milk room should be provided. Milk to be sold should never be handled in a dwelling as there is too much chance of dangerous contamination in case sickness occurs in the family.

Clean Utensils.

Milk utensils which are not properly washed or sterilized may be the greatest source of contamination. They should be rinsed inside and outside with lukewarm or cold water as soon as possible after use, then placed in a wash vat, scrubbed with a brush in warm water containing a soda ash or alkaline washing powder (not soap, rinsed placed in a sterilizing cabinet, and thoroughly steamed.

The best way to prevent multiplication of bacteria which unavoidably get into the milk is to cool the milk as soon as possible after it is produced and keep it cold. Bacteria are tiny single-celled plants, which, like most other plants, require warmth to grow. If milk is cooled to 50 degrees F. or below and held at that temperature, bacterial development is very much retarded. Milk should not only be kept cold until it leaves the farm but should also be protected from the sun and warm air while being transported from farm to city.

A copy of the leaflet may be secured by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Value of Wood Ashes as a Fertilizer Will Vary

The value of wood ashes as a fertilizer varies considerably, depending upon whether or not they have been leached, kind of wood they came from, method of burning, etc. Good quality wood ashes contain 5 to 7 per cent potash, and 1.5 to 2 per cent of phosphoric acid. If the ashes have been leached by lying out in the weather they may contain not more than 1 per cent of potash and an equal amount of phosphoric acid. The amount of calcium will vary from 20 to 50 per cent but it usually runs between 30 and 35 per cent. By way of comparison high grade ground limestone may contain as much as 98 per cent calcium compounds.

Blanching Celery While Growing Is Best Method

If celery is not blanched while growing the green stalks can never be fully blanched. The common method of blanching and perhaps the best way is to hill up the growing celery as it grows, with earth. It will blanch slightly when stored in a cellar or if grown in pots and placed in the cellar, but when stored for winter most of the white stalks are new growth made by moving materials from the older stalks and leaves to form the newer stalks and leaves. This new growth will be practically white when the sun does not shine on them.

GOOD QUALITIES IN DIRTY-FACED BOYS

Dirty-faced youths make excellent office boys when given a good scrubbing, the Westminster (London) juvenile employment advisory committee has concluded after numerous experiments.

Some employers prefer dirty-faced boys to begin with. One employer wrote to the committee: "I want an honest little tough with rather dirty knees and a soiled face and thorough understanding that life is a struggle and the devil take the hindmost. I prefer them (i. e., boys, not devils) to be short, sturdily built, either fair and dirty faced, or dark and red faced with just a suspicion of a cold in the head."

OBSOLETE FLIVVER WINS FIRST PRIZE

When Jack Palmer and Bob Hays decided to enter their rather old fashioned and now perhaps obsolete flivver in a bench parade held at San Diego recently, they little knew that the first prize would be theirs. The photograph shows Jack Palmer and Bob Hays in their "strange" flivver which won first prize.

WITHIN THE MAGIC CIRCLE OF WHEEL

Physicians Recommend Automobile Driving as Cure for Nervousness.

Within the magic circle of a motor car's steering wheel, the driver may find increased health and happiness.

This statement, poetical as it sounds, is based on hard facts. Physicians today recommend automobile driving as a cure for many of those minor nervous disorders, which, though unimportant in themselves, can make life thoroughly miserable. Worry, timidity, "that tired feeling"—ailments such as these, it is claimed, respond to the car-driving treatment, although the automobile should never be considered a "cure all."

Why Driving Is Healthful.
The principal health value in driving an automobile is that driving furnishes a form of exercise that it is difficult to obtain outside a gymnasium. Dr. Henry Smith Williams, of the National Committee of Mental Hygiene, says that driving as an exercise is better than walking, because in walking only the leg muscles are exercised, while in driving the important muscles of the trunk are stimulated. It is true, he says, that the handling of the steering wheel is not a strenuous form of exercise, but he points out that this, instead of being a defect, is a merit, because it assures mild, but persistent, exercise.

What Becomes of "Nerves"?
But what about "nerves"? It is a curious fact that driving an automobile, instead of being a source of worry and fear, often produces a healthy, confident mental attitude. Many splendid and fearless drivers are timid of men and women who are timid about riding in a car which somebody else drives. A new sense of power, the vision of almost unlimited possibilities for self improvement, seem to go along with the mastery of driving principles. The steering wheel of a motor car has led many out of a morbid, imaginative world into the normal world of reality and well-being.

Old Law Holds Inn for Theft of an Automobile

In olden days in England when inns were remote and highwaymen were rampant it was not uncommon for the robbers and the innkeepers to be in league, so laws were passed holding innkeepers responsible for the safety of guests and their goods.

These laws still stand, and figured in the loss of an automobile valued at £267, stolen from the parking place of the Bridge House hotel at Staines. Alexander Dixon Arie, a banker's agent, contended that by the innkeepers' act the common law of England was applicable.

Justice Swift pointed out that the law had been framed for hundreds of years, that under it an innkeeper was liable for the safety of his guests and such of their property as came into his custody, and the jury found for the plaintiff in the case.

TELEVISION TOO SLOW YET TO BE PRACTICAL

But Short Step Now Towards Seeing by Radio

New York.—Forty thousand electric impulses a second, riding wireless waves which travel 186,000 miles a second—that is radio television today, and still it is not fast enough to be practical.

Now that the transatlantic beam radio transmission and television have been accomplished, laymen may regard it as a short step to the time when scenes and speeches from a Geneva peace conference can be carried into their homes.

But the scientists and engineers who are intrusted with the task of bringing about something of that sort are doubtful. They point out a multitude of obstacles, and say that general use of television, especially for big scenes, may never be practical. Yet while they doubt they are industriously attempting to remove the obstacles of television for such practical organizations as the Radio Corporation of America and the American Bell Telephone company.

In Actual Use.

Beam transmission for messages and photographs is not only practical; it is in actual use for messages from London to Cape Town, Canada and Australia. This autumn the Radio corporation will put a beam line into operation between London and New York, in addition to its "undirected" broadcasting lines.

But the beam, which takes only about one-fourth as much power as generally radiated broadcasting, is not the slim pencil of energy visualized by amateur prophets. It is rather a cone, which spreads so much in traveling 3,000 miles across the Atlantic that nobody really knows how broad it is at the base.

The power picked up at the end of the line is too weak to overcome interference sufficiently for flawless work in the delicate task of transmitting scenes of persons and things in motion—but that is probably one of the minor obstacles which will be dissolved with time. Increased speed of transmission may prove to be the real solution of the problem.

The Radio corporation has machines which can send and receive 250 words per minute, about eight times as many as the human operators can send and receive, over ether waves that travel with the speed of light. This speed of transmission gives secrecy to messages.

But television requires a speed that makes 250 words a minute seem nothing at all. Using a transmitter that would fill a fair sized room—and size of equipment is one of the minor obstacles to commercial television at present—the best available apparatus of the Bell Telephone laboratories manages to transmit over wires or ether waves a picture about three inches square. Engineers consider this far too small a space to portray a king's coronation or a football game.

2,500 Dots on Picture.

The three-inch picture consists of 2,500 dots of light and darkness, flashed on the screen separately, but so fast that the eye seems to see them all at once. To get motion into the picture, at least sixteen slightly different scenes must be flashed on the screen each second, each reproduced from the source by a separate electrical impulse. The dots have been enlarged to a maximum that gives a blurred picture two feet square, but the picture loses clarity with each amplification.

To transmit these "dot" impulses, energy for synchronization of machines and for a conversation, requires facilities that would carry four to six telephone conversations. Enlargements would be possible by dividing a scene, for instance, into quarter sections, transmitting each section as a separate picture and then recombining them as a single view. But this would require four transmitters, with transmission facilities for sixteen to twenty telephone conversations, or, if sent by air, it would occupy the ether wave bands of sixteen radio stations, and it would transmit scenes one way only.

Greater speed in transmission, a speed so nearly incomprehensible that it may never be attainable, is perhaps the secret of television on a broad scale. One hundred and sixty thousand impulses per second, each reproducing a spot of light or darkness, would theoretically give a picture four times as large, and more dots would give larger scenes in proportion. But cautious scientists refuse to say more than that it "might be possible," and that it "might solve this particular part of the whole problem." Meantime experts in the telephone laboratories are trying to find out just what needs to be done and what can be done to make television commercially practical.

Convenient Support for Holding Heavy Tires

In vulcanizing shops where many large heavy tires are repaired the labor of buffing and cleaning the damaged fabric is extremely difficult, as each tire not only must be supported at several different angles against the buffing wheel, but must often be held in one position for a considerable length of time. To simplify the task, a Wisconsin repairman devised an adjustable support which accommodates itself instantly to any size tire. The clamp that holds the tire is made from two short pieces of two by four inch material, hinged to open one way only.

Handy Support for Holding Heavy Tires Against Buffing Wheel Eliminates Unnecessary Work.

from a pulley in the ceiling by means of a counterbalanced rope. In operation the clamp is drawn down to the floor and the hinged clamp partly closed so that the ends of the legs may be inserted into the tire. When the rope is released the counterweight draws the clamp upward, opening the hinge so that the tire is held firmly and may be easily supported at any height desired. (Thus the operator is free to direct his entire energy and attention to the buffing and cleaning without undue fatigue.—G. E. Hendrickson, Argyle, Wis., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

A large map is placed near detour signs in Massachusetts to show motorists how to get around construction work.

A little care in preparing the engine for operation may save a great deal of trouble and possibly repair bills at a later time.

And who among our pioneer motorists remembers the old-fashioned celluloid windshield that couldn't live near a hot cigar?

Motorists in the United States are saving $2,500,000,000 a year on gasoline, tires, parts, upkeep, renewals and all other expenses due to the improved highways of the country.

During 1926, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad reports, 153 automobiles crashed into the company's trains. It is believed that approximately 99 per cent of these contests were won by the train.
